

Dr. Glenwood Ross Dr. Glenwood Ross is a Clinical Associate Professor of Economics and Co-Director of the Economic Studies in South Africa Program at Georgia State University. He joined GSU in 2009 after twelve years at Morehouse College in Atlanta. He has a BA in economics from Morehouse College, an MA in Economics from Wayne State University, an MA in International Public Policy from Johns Hopkins School of Advanced International Studies, and a PhD in Economics from GSU. Dr. Ross specializes in undergraduate economics education. His research interest focuses on urban economics, economic development, and economic pedagogy. He is currently working on papers that investigate low-income housing tax credits and affordable housing.

Learn More Here