

Dr. Nannette Commander, Professor Emerita, Department of Learning Sciences

Nannette Commander is Professor Emerita of Educational Psychology and Virtual Exchange Coordinator in the Office of International Initiatives at Georgia State University. Her primary research areas are learning and cognition, cross-cultural learning, reading comprehension, and academic success in higher education. Her most recent work includes fostering cross-cultural competency through technology that allows students to work collaboratively with their peers at international universities. She has published numerous articles in respected journals, including Journal of Technology and Teacher Education, Journal of Adolescent & Adult Literacy, Journal of Reading, Journal of College Student Retention, Journal of College Literacy & Learning, Contemporary Educational Psychology, and Journal of Developmental Education. Additionally, she has taught both undergraduate and graduate courses, including The Science of Learning, Exploring Learning and Teaching, The Psychology of Learning and the Learner, Psychology of Instruction, Professional Development Seminar, and Facilitating College Teaching. Dr Commander also served as Assistant Vice President of Recruitment and Retention and other administrative roles creating and implementing programs to foster college students' academic success.

Learn More: Here