

Eric Kendrick, Associate Professor, English Department

Eric Kendrick is an Associate Professor of English, ESL and Applied Linguistics at Georgia State University's Perimeter College, where he has also taught Public Speaking. He has been teaching English as a Second Language for about thirty years. Eric has traveled, worked, or taught in over forty countries, namely in Asia, Europe, and Latin America. He loves global cinema, and coordinates GSU's role in the Atlanta Asian Film Festival, the largest of its kind in the Southeast, which is held at the Dunwoody Campus. Another interest is food from different cultures, and he can often be found eating at restaurants and cafes in Atlanta's Buford Highway international district. Eric grew up in North Georgia, where he enjoyed hiking in the mountains, riding horses, and playing basketball.
